GLUTEN-FREE

GLUTEN-FREE LIVING APPEALS TO ABOUT 30% OF AMERICAN ADULTS

AN ESTIMATED 1 IN 133 AMERICANS, OR ABOUT 1% OF THE POPULATION, HAS CELIAC DISEASE.*

CELIAC DISEASE: A disease in which the small intestine is hypersensitive to gluten, leading to damage of the small intestine.

More than 1/3 of consumers claim gluten-free/wheat-free is an important factor when they are shopping for food.

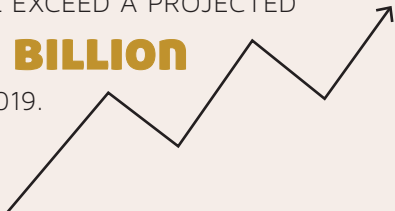

GLUTEN-FREE FOODS ASSOCIATED WITH CLAIMS SUCH AS "NATURAL" OR "HEALTHIER" FOODS APPEAL TO A WIDER AUDIENCE.

"Retailers have embraced the gluten-free trend by stocking more gluten-free items, featuring them in store, and launching their own private label brands," says Packaged Facts research director David Sprinkle.

SALES OF GLUTEN-FREE FOOD WILL EXCEED A PROJECTED $2 BILLION IN 2019.

The fast-growing gluten-free market has benefited from a broader audience trying to avoid gluten or wheat for health, weight loss or other reasons.

A gluten-free diet is one that denotes the consumption of grains including wheat, barley, rye or any associated hybrids and forms of these granules. With 1 in every 133 Americans – 1% of the population – living with celiac disease, which causes damage to the small intestine when gluten is consumed, gluten-free products are becoming more abundant in the market. Research shows that a gluten-free lifestyle appeals to 30 percent of American adults for health, weight loss or other reasons not associated with celiac disease. PreGel America's gluten-free dessert ingredient solutions allow for innovative chefs to achieve the authentic, artisanal results they desire, while adhering to the dietary restrictions of gluten-free living. Utilizing substitute ingredients for traditional inclusions help to create a total gluten-free experience with delectable results that all can enjoy.
